MEXICANS MOCK MIGHTY MATADOR, SO HE QUITS 'EM

The Great Fernandez, Who Has Killed 6,000 Bulls, Will Kill No More.

Most positively the great Francisco Fernandez has wiped the red, red lood from his sword for the last time, and the honorable buil may five to die the death natural. Six, seven thousand of them they have come into the ring on four legs to face the mighty Matador, and to leave (what you might say ignoously) on four wheels.

On board the excellent steamship Montserrat, which stops go-day at Nueva York on her way from Vera Crus to Cadis, is the great Senor Fernandez, and ringing in his ears are the impolite jeers of the Mexicans, who have lived too long on the borders of the ringoes to retain Castillan courtesy. Ringing in his ears ulso is the frightened trampling of the Chicago passen-gers on the cattle ship which the Mont-serrat passes in the harbor, for they sense the Fernandes presence, and they dread that he repent of his reselye to ight no more the bull and leap among sandes sent all Spain to mourning by signing a contract with a Mexican impreserio of the bull ring. No more would the Castillan enemy stand up and face him, man to bull, such had been the spread of his prowess. Even the red nose of the Picador Alfonso. long distance one-hundred and-five-pound wine drinker of Castile, could no longer excite the bull of Spain when the Senor Fernandez stood before him with his gleaming sword. So to Mexico, where the bulls perhaps had not carned to fear. MEXICAN BULL TOSSES THE GREAT FERNANDEZ. And most surely the bulls of Mexico proved to be hardy and without the streak of ochre. They stepped into the ring—the same ring with the great Fernandez-without a tremor and advanced boldly toward him. Once more the nose of the Picador Alfonso roused them to the wildest fury. So came the first Mexican bull which the Senor Fer nandez encountered, and the matador nandez encountered, and the matador from Madrid stood his ground. Bah, a buil that is timid is only the harder to caten and to kill! But this buil executed what is called the footwork, and tossed the Senor Fernandez into the box where sits he who is Mayor of Vera Cruz and stands waiting for him to return, as one who sends the handball to the wall.

But it is not for this inconvenience that the matador is made to have his feelings.

But it is not for this inconvenience that the matador is made to have his feelings trurt—it is the manner in which the heartless spectators act. A cry goes up as the Senor Fernandez is assisted to his feet—not the cry of solicitude, concern, no! Can it be they are calling "Deja me la viuda!" which in the English means, "Leave me your widow." "Deja me la viuda!" which in the English means, "Leave me your widow!"
Back into the ring steps the Senor Fernandez, and all the surrounding atmosphere seems to him in color even as the Picador Alfonso's nose. The esteemed sword flashez. It is the celebrated neck-to-heart stroke and—poot!—
the bull is dead! The fight is over, yet there is a breach between the matador and those who witness his skill that time can never bridge—only widen.
CROWD ALWAYS JEERS THE CROWD ALWAYS JEERS THE MATADOR.

There are many more fights and many more bulls go to death, but always the more bulls go to death, but always the crowd is, what you hall antagonistic. When the foot of the maindor sips and the enemy is upon him, they bry: "El coche de funere espara ustel!" This means that the hearse is waiting for the one addressed, and is an insult such as no Castillan would utter.

In the soul of the Matador Fernandez thre is born the goat, as the gringoes may, and at each cry of the taunting mature the goat emerges and trips up senor Matador, so that the bull gore him quite occasionally. And so finally the nerve has quite gone and the Senor have decided to quit the ring forever.

He has not spent the blood money of the bull upon impressionistic coloring as has the Picador Alfonso, so there is in the bank a fortune of fifty thousand pesos, so he tells the sympathetic gringo who have come from The thetic gringo who have come from The Evening Wor-r-rid. And he shall spend it in Castile, where the so-to-speak goat may die and one would as soon sacrifice the right eye as to say to another: "El coche funchre espera usted!"

KEPT THREAT TO QUIT HOME.

Annie Flemm, sixteen, daughter of Albert Flemm, a Long Island saloonkeeper, left her home two weeks ago keeper, left her home two weeks ago to visit her grandfather. John Meyer of No. 149 Steinway avenue. Long Island City, and has not been seen since. When seen yesterday Flemm and his wife were half crazed by grief. Annie is five feet five inches tall and weighs about 135 pounds. She has brown hair and gray eyes. She took all of her photographs away, and as far as known had only 50 cents. Shortly before leaving me told her brother, John, who teased her about being kept in the house, she would go away some day and not come back. day and not come back.
